

MICROCHIPPING

DID YOU KNOW THAT EVERY 2 SECONDS a family pet goes missing in the United States? Tragically many never return home due to lack of identification. A microchip along with a collar and tag are the best ways to ensure you will be reunited with your pet if they go missing.

WHAT IS A MICROCHIP AND HOW DOES IT WORK?

A microchip is a non-removable form of identification. It is about the size of a grain of rice that contains a personal identification number that stays with your pet for its lifetime. The chip is inserted underneath the skin between the shoulder blades and is a safe and easy procedure. It is a quick procedure as well; it takes the same amount of time to place a microchip as it does to administer a vaccination. The needle that inserts the chip under the skin is a little bigger than a normal vaccination needle so there can be a little discomfort when administering it but a lot of pets don't even react to it and they only have to do it once, remember the microchip last the length of your pet's life.

A microchip is not a GPS tracking device. You cannot track down your pet's location from a microchip. A microchip is similar to a barcode at a grocery store that you can scan. When a pet is scanned a series of numbers and possibly letters will show up that are unique to your animal. When your pet is found and taken to a veterinary clinic or animal shelter the staff there will have a handheld scanner that can read the number specific to your animal and will contact the microchip company that has your information on file. From there either the microchip company or the shelter or clinic you are at will contact you directly. Keep in mind, the microchip is only as good as the information associated with it. Make sure that if you ever move or change your phone number you contact the company the microchip came from and have your information updated. This is a very simple process and can be done either online or over the phone depending on the company.

WHY MICROCHIP, CAN'T I JUST KEEP A COLLAR AND TAG ON MY PET?

We suggest that you do keep a collar and tag on your pet as well as getting a microchip. Often times collars fall off or break and tags can get snagged or pulled off especially during the great escape. It is always a good idea to have a back up form of identification that will still be with your pet even if a collar or tags have been lost.
